The CPRWA, as it is more commonly known, was first established in July 2010. The main purpose is to help establish a better understanding of these remarkable cream coloured horses and ponies with their ice blue eyes and to dismiss the myth that they are somehow connected to a lethal gene. There are no known hereditary defects associated with these horses. They are not albinos, in fact there is no documented case of albinism in horses as yet. They have pigmented skin and are no more prone to skin cancers than any other horse. More importantly they all seem to display a calm temperament and good disposition. Breeding Cremello and Perlino together is also perfectly safe and this has been done in Nebraska US since 1919.

Pure coloured Cremello and Perlino horses have no connection to 'Lethal White Overo' LWO, a gene associated with breeding Paint Horse.

Breeding Buckskins & Palominos

A Secondary reason for setting up the CPRWA registry is to supply a reliable registry of horses suitable for breeders who would like to breed Buckskin and Palomino coloured horses and ponies.

Breeding a Perlino or Cremello to Chestnut, Bay Brown or Black, give a 100% chance of breeding Buckskin or Palomino. Understanding the varying combinations of the Black gene and the Agouti allele that both parents carry will help to narrow the probability more precisely as to which colour and shade of colour is likely, but you will defiantly have a Buckskin or Palomino.

Registration Requirements

There are two main sections to the CPRWA Studbook:

Foal Recording: For horses up to two years. Foal Recording Certificate Expire on 31 July in the year the horse turns 3 years.

Adult Registration: Horses two and over may apply for Adult Registration. A definite colour classification will be made when a horse is adult registered.

Cream Appendix: For the purpose of identification and registration will be all registered Buckskin, Cream/Dun and Palomino as long as they are registered in a reliable colour registry affiliated with or accepted by WABA.

Classification & Registration:

Currently you must be a WABA member to register a horse with the CPRWA. That is because the CPRWA has been set up by the WABA and will not be a stand alone registry until it is considered necessary. Registration is done on a prescribed form available on the CPRWA website or by contacting the Secretary. Classification is usually done by photo. Some horses may require a visual classification and/or a veterinary certificate of hereditary soundness. A DNA genetic hair colour test, will be asked for if colour is not clear.

Horses registered with a recognized breed society are systematically accepted as long as they have the correct colour genetics.

Horses eligible for Registration

There is no preferred type. However, it is required that the horse or pony be a good representation of the its breed or type. There is no height or age bar on eligibility for registration.

Grounds for Rejection

Horses showing/carrying Appaloosa, Paint/Pinto (Pied), Grey, Roan Taffy/Silver, Champagne, Pearl or smut/sooty characteristics will not be accepted. Standardbred are also not accepted. Any one may apply for registration under the Hardship Clause, in the CPRWA Regulations. Horses having white on any other part that do not reflect Paint/Pinto characteristics will be viewed on a one to one basis.
